The Government of Lithuania is the latest to be deposed and supplanted by a dictator. The condon Times is credited with having once remarked that democratic government was still in the experimental stage on the continent of Korth Mmerica. May it be suggested that the continent of Europe seems to be doing considerable experimenting along the same lime? And that as far as results are yet apparent, they seem to be daming the claims and prespects of democracy in that part of the world?
